

SUMMARY: The document below is the last will and testament, dated 7 October 1516 and proved 28 August 1517, of John Cooke (1485-1516), the grandfather of Oxford's mother-in-law, Mildred (nee Cooke) Cecil, Lady Burghley. The testator was the son of Sir Philip Cooke and Elizabeth Belknap, and the grandson of Sir Thomas Cooke (c.1410-1478), a wealthy draper who was Lord Mayor of London in 1462-3, by Elizabeth Malpas, one of the two daughters of another wealthy London draper, Philip Malpas (d.1469). According to the ODNB, Sir Thomas Cooke (c.1410-1478) was the son of another draper, Thomas Cooke, warden of London Bridge (1440-57), who was the son of Robert Cooke of Lavenham, Suffolk. See the ODNB entry for Sir Thomas Cooke and the will of Philip Malpas, TNA PROB 11/5/114.

The testator's mother, Elizabeth Belknap, was a descendant of Geoffrey Plantagenet. See Richardson, Douglas, Plantagenet Ancestry, 2nd ed., 2011, Vol. I, pp. 229-35.

Two of the testator's executors, Gerard Danett and William Shelley, were his uncles. The testator's grandfather, Henry Belknap (c.1434-1488), esquire, of Crofton, Kent and Beccles, Suffolk, had by his wife, Margaret, the daughter of Sir Richard Knollys, a son, the courtier and soldier, Sir Edward Belknap (1470-1521), and six daughters: Griselda (d.1498), who married John Caryll (1460s-1523); Alice (*b. c.*1481, d. in or before 1537), who about 1498 married Sir William Shelley (1478/9-1549); Mary, who married Gerard Danett (d.1520); Anne, who married Sir Robert Wotton (c.1463-1524) of Boughton Malherbe; Margaret, who is said to have married John Boteler, esquire, of Watton at Stone, and to have died 18 August 1513; and Elizabeth, who married the testator's father, Sir Philip Cooke. See Plantagenet Ancestry, supra, pp. 234-5; the entries for John Caryll, Sir William Shelley and Sir Edward Wotton in the ODNB, Note and Queries, Vol. VIII, July-December 1853, p. 363; and the will of Mary (nee Belknap) Danett (TNA PROB 11/42A/123). See also the website at the link below, which states that Mary (nee Belknap) Danett was co-heir to her brother, Sir Edward Belknap, with her sisters Alice, wife of William Shelley; Anne, wife of Sir Robert Wotton; and Elizabeth, wife of Sir Philip Cooke, 'whose names are continually mentioned in conjunction with the Danett name in many documents in this period':

The testator's aunt, Mary (nee Belknap) Danett was the grandmother of Oxford's steward/surveyor, Sir John Arundel (d.1590), for whose will see TNA PROB 11/76/403.

The testator married twice. His first wife was Alice Saunders (d.1510), the daughter of William Saunders of Banbury, Oxfordshire, by whom he had a son, Sir Anthony Cooke (1505/6-1576), and a daughter, Beatrix (d.1561), who married Richard Ogle (d.1555). The testator's second wife was Margaret Pennington, a lady-in-waiting to Queen Katherine of Aragon and later to Princess Mary. The testator also names a daughter, Mary, in the will below; however this daughter is not noticed in Plantagenet Ancestry, and it is not known whether Mary was the daughter of the testator's first or second marriage. For the will of the testator's son and heir, Sir Anthony Cooke, see TNA PROB

11/59/110. For the will of the testator's son-in-law, Richard Ogle (d.1555), see TNA PROB 11/38/252.

The testator's sister, Beatrix Cooke, married Sir Nicholas Rawson of Aveley, Essex. Their daughter, Anne Rawson, married Michael Stanhope, who was beheaded on Tower Hill in 1552, as was his brother-in-law, Edward Seymour, the Protector Somerset: From the ODNB:

Stanhope, Sir Michael (b. before 1508, d. 1552), courtier, was the second son of Sir Edward Stanhope (d. 1511), knight of the body to Henry VII, and Adelina, daughter of Sir Gervase Clifton of Clifton, Nottinghamshire. In January 1529, following the death of his elder brother, Richard, without male children, he became head of the Stanhope family; by November 1537 he had married Anne (c.1515–1588), daughter of Nicholas Rawson of Aveley, Essex, and they had seven sons and four daughters. Among his sons were the lawyer Sir Edward Stanhope and the courtier John Stanhope. . . . Stanhope's sister Anne had by 1535 married Sir Edward Seymour [=the Protector Somerset] as his second wife.

Michael Stanhope was involved in the Protector Somerset's fraud against Oxford's father, the 16th Earl. See TNA E 328-345 and other documents on this website, and The Fall of the House of Oxford by the author of this website.

Oxford was personally acquainted with the testator's first cousin, Sir Richard Shelley (c.1513-1587), the second son of the testator's uncle and aunt, Sir William Shelley and his wife, Alice Belknap. Sir Richard Shelley was resident in Venice when Oxford was there on his continental tour in 1575/6, and Oxford's personal acquaintance with him is evidenced by an allegation made by Charles Arundel in January 1581 (see TNA SP 12/151/49, f. 109):

4 That he [=Oxford] had detected Shelley at Rome to the fugitives for giving intelligence to my Lord Treasurer.

Sir Richard Shelley is cited by the author of A Conference about the Next Succession to the Crown of England (1594) as having supplied him with genealogical information:

Divers other papers, notes and memories I have seen also (said he), as well touching the succession of those whom I have named as of others, for that Sir Richard Shelley, who died some years ago in Venice, by the name of Lord Prior of St John's of England, had gathered divers points touching these affairs, & many more than he had Master Francis Peto that died in Milan, and was a very curious and well-readen man in genealogies, as may appear by sundry papers that I have seen of his.

It has been suggested that Oxford was the author of A Conference, and his relationship to the Shelley family through his mother-in-law, Lady Burghley, a descendant of Elizabeth Belknap, offers support for that suggestion.
