The testator was the first cousin of George Saunders, murdered on 25 March 1573 by Oxford's former servant, George Browne. The murder was the subject of a pamphlet by Oxford's uncle, Arthur Golding (1535/6-1606), Brief Discourse of the Late Murther of Master George Saunders, and an anonymous play, A Warning for Fair Women, performed by the Lord Chamberlain's Men.

For the will of the testator's uncle, William Saunders of Welford (d.1541x2), Northamptonshire, father of the murdered George Saunders, see TNA PROB 11/28/488.

The testator outlived his brothers and sisters. In his will he leaves a bequest to his nephew, William Starkey, the son of his sister, Audrey Saunders, and her husband, William Starkey (d.1555). For the will of the testator's brother-in-law, William Starkey (d.1555), see TNA PROB 11/37/321. The testator appoints as supervisor of his will his nephew, Sir Christopher Hatton (c.1540-1591), the son of his sister, Alice Saunders. See the pedigree of Hatton in Metcalfe, supra, p. 27. As his executor, the testator appoints another nephew, Bartholomew Tate (c.1532-1601), the son of his sister, Anne Saunders (c.1512-1565). See the pedigree of Tate in Metcalfe, supra, pp. 198-9; and the History of Parliament biography of Bartholomew Tate at:

<http://www.historyofparliamentonline.org/volume/1558-1603/member/tate-bartholomew-1532-1601>.

The testator married Frances Zouche, the daughter of William Zouche of Bulwick, Northamptonshire, and his wife, Jane Bradbourne. William Zouche was the son of John Zouche, 7th Baron Zouche (c.1440-1527) of Harringworth, who fought for Richard III at Bosworth, and the brother of John Zouche (d.1551), 8th Baron Zouche of Harringworth (for whose will see TNA PROB 11/34, ff. 79-80). By his wife, Frances Zouche, the testator had a son, Edward Saunders (buried 1 December 1599) of Hackney, who married Susan Mackwilliam, the daughter of Henry Mackwilliam, a gentleman pensioner at the court of Queen Elizabeth, by Mary Hill (d.1616), daughter and co-heiress of Richard Hill, esquire, and widow of the scholar Sir John Cheke, tutor to Edward VI and brother-in-law of Lord Burghley, whose first wife was Mary Cheke (c.1520–1544). Henry Mackwilliam jousted against Oxford in a tournament at Westminster on 1-3 May 1571 (see Segar on this website). For Henry Mackwilliam's nuncupative will, dated 25 December 1586, see TNA PROB 11/70/244.

By Frances Zouche the testator also had a daughter, Audrey Saunders (d.1588), who was the first wife of Sir George Villiers (1550-1606) of Brokesby, father of King James' favourite, George Villiers (1592-1628), 1st Duke of Buckingham. For the will of the testator's son, Edward Saunders (buried 1 December 1599), see Howard, supra, pp. 159-60. For the pedigree showing the descendants of the testator's daughter, Audrey Saunders (d.1588), see Bloomfield, Paul, 'The Descendants of Sir George Villiers', The Eugenics Review, Vol. 39, No. 2, (July 1947), pp. 63-7, available online at:

The testator's marriage to Frances Zouche linked the family, albeit distantly, to the Earls of Oxford. Catherine Zouche, the aunt of the testator's wife, Frances Zouche, married firstly, Sir Robert Brandon, son of Sir William Brandon (d.1491) and Elizabeth Wingfield, and secondly, John Carew (d.1528 at Pavia), the son of Sir Nicholas Carew (d. 13 September 1469) of Haccombe, Devonshire, fifth son of Sir Nicholas Carew (1409?-1448?) and Joan Courtenay (1411?-1465?), the daughter of Sir Hugh Courtney by his third wife, Philippe, daughter and co-heiress of Sir Warin l'Arcedekne. After the death of Sir Nicholas Carew (1409?-1448?), Joan (nee Courtenay) Carew married, by licence dated 5 October 1450, Sir Robert Vere (d.1461?), younger brother of John de Vere (1442-1513), 13th Earl of Oxford.
