

SUMMARY: The document below is an account for Oxford's manor of Christian Malford from 29 September 1562 to 29 September 1563 made by Thomas Lee, deputy of Jerome Balborough, bailiff of Christian Malford, showing that the total receipt for the manor in that year, beyond reprises of £5 13s 8d for the fees of the bailiff and steward of the manor and the expenses of holding the manor courts, was £46 13s 5d. In the 16th Earl's inquisition post mortem (PRO C 142/136/12), the manor was stated to be worth £37 9s 3-3/4 d in net annual revenues, and in Part 35 of WARD 8/13 the sum of £10 19s 8d di qa was added to that figure for rent increases resulting from a survey by the feodary of Wiltshire, bringing the net yearly revenue for the manor of Christian Malford to £48 8s 11-3/4d di qa. However according to the account below, in the year 1562-3 the manor yielded only £46 13s 5d in net revenue. Moreover the expenses incurred in holding the manor courts exceeded the profits, as noted below.
